Mannerheim, Grizzled Finn Leader,
Hurds Dramatic Defy at Russians

PARIS, Jan. 17.—"We will fight to the last of our old men and the last of our children. We will burn our houses and our forests. We will destroy our towns and our industries—and what we give to the Russians will be cursed by nature."

This dramatic challenge to the Soviet Union was voiced today by Field Marshal Baron Carl von Mannerheim, commander-in-chief of the Finnish army, in an interview with Georges Kessel, war correspondent of the Paris Soir.

It was the first statement the grizzled old Finnish warrior had made since he emerged from retirement to lead Finland in its staunch and courageous resistance to the Russian invaders.

Kessel saw the 72-year-old field marshal at his headquarters "somewhere on the Finnish front."

"The world once laughed at us," Mannerheim said, "because we organized our 'women's battalion,' the Lotta Sværds auxiliaries who have taken over the regular jobs of men."

"But these brave women, by going to work with both hands, have made it possible for every able-bodied man in Finland to go to the front."

"You can understand that each man in Finland is precious and valuable. He has to fight one against fifty."

"I know the Russian soldier. I esteem him. He is hard and courageous, particularly when he is fighting a defensive war."

"But his importance lies in his numbers. Mass inevitably constitutes a crushing force."

President Sends Notes To Leaders Suggesting
Money For Nation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Certain delay and probable rejection today faced President Roosevelt's proposal for enlarging export-import bank capital to provide a loan for Finland.

Privately, some of his most vigorous supporters admitted the move was "a dead duck." Even senate Democratic Leader Barkley refused to predict that Finnish aid legislation would pass.

Two senate committees considered the proposal, embodied in identical letters the President sent Speaker Bankhead and Vice-President Garner. Before the banking committee, was also the bill of Senator Brown (D-Michigan), calling for a $60,000,000 RFC loan to Finland.

The foreign relations committee met only with the presidential letter before it, but with the senate pledged to submit any legislation approved by the banking committee to foreign relations committee study, before final action.

There was plenty of trouble ahead for the Brown measure in the banking committee and Barkley predicted that if any legislation were reported it would be a re-drafted bill. Republican committee-men oppose any and all plans for loaning money to Finland on the ground it would violate the spirit of American neutrality.

Bitterest opposition to the entire proposition was displayed among the membership of the foreign relations committee. Prominent members of this committee in both Democratic and Republican ranks predicted Finnish aid measures would be pigeon-holed by the committee.

"I can't predict what will happen to the legislation before either house," said a committee member. (Continued on Page Two)

-50 Degree Weather
Strikes War Zone;
Russians Trapped?

HELSINKI, Jan. 17.—While intense cold that plunged to more than 50 degrees below zero added to the suffering in bomb-wrecked Finnish towns, reports from the eastern battle zone indicated today that Finnish troops have cut the rear communications of two crack Red army divisions on the Salla Front.

A statement in the official communiqué—"near the eastern frontier at Salla our troops dispersed two enemy companies"—and late advice to the capital combined to show that the two Soviet divisions there finally have been cut off from their supply bases after days of guerrilla warfare.

The Russian divisions, described as troops from the Ukraine and the best Soviet soldiers yet seen in Finland, have been moving from Salla in the direction of Kemijärvi.

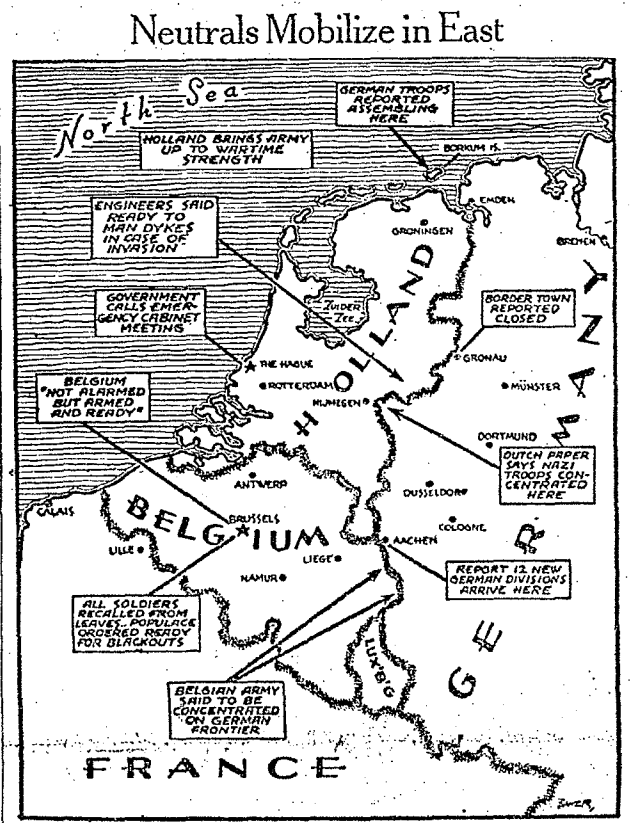

Advices this afternoon indicated that the Russian divisions are retreating and making special attempts to prevent the Finns from capturing the artillery pieces.

At the same time, the Russians were reported taking extreme measures to increase the efficiency of the Leningrad-Murmansk railway, which has been cut frequently by Finnish raiders.

A number of Soviet functionaries were said to have been arrested on charges of sabotaging the line, which is a vital supply route for the Russian troops in the Far North.

Military reports to Helsinki said that Finnish commanders expected important events shortly on the Salla Front despite the intensely cold weather which has been hampering operations for the last few days.

THIS self-explanatory map shows why neutral Holland and Belgium are suffering from the jitters again. Close to 1,000,000 Belgian and Dutch soldiers are reported massed along the eastern borders ready to repulse any German flank attack against the Allies.

RUSSIAN RADIO
ATTACKS DANISH
AID FOR FINNS

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A bitter attack against Denmark for alleged aid to Finland was broadcast by the Moscow radio today, according to the London Daily Mail.

The announcer was quoted as stating: "The Danish government has completely lost control. The people are in daily revolt against the aid sent to Finland, but are being suppressed with great cruelty and violence."

According to the Mail the announcement contained a veiled threat of Russian interference to rescue the "oppressed" Danish people.

The anti-aircraft gun, said Austin, fires 200 one-inch shells a minute, reaches 80,000 feet altitude, and can spray an area of 50,000 square feet a minute. It operates on a single mount on the machine gun principle of rapid fire. The two cannons rotate back and forth in opposite directions through restricted arcs.

The grenade, made from light duralumin, operates on the rocket principle, can be hurled from a mortar type gun and has a further charge in the tail to propel it five miles if necessary, thus eliminating the danger of the enemy throwing it back.

The Rev. L. C. Sherburne, pastor of the Episcopal Church, was appointed Wednesday by Mayor William Cady to fill the vacancy on the Board of Trustees of the Public Library caused by the resignation of George D. McDowell, county superintendent of schools.

Mr. McDowell tendered his resignation Tuesday when he felt that he was no longer eligible to serve since his residence in Ashville prevents him from being an elector of the city of Circleville. The appointment will fill the unexpired term which runs until January 1, 1942.

"I appreciate the appointment and shall serve as best I can," was Rev. Sherburne's only statement.

PLANE FALLS INTO SEA
KILLING NAVY AVIATOR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Naval Reserve Pilot Malcom Charles Kirby was killed when his airplane crashed into the sea while in flight from the aircraft carrier Ranger in the Atlantic, the Navy Department announced today.

The crash occurred yesterday afternoon and Kirby's body was not recovered. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. M. C. Kirby of Norfolk, Va., and his mother, Mrs. O. A. Kirby of Granite, Okla.

Although Gov. Long still enjoyed up enough votes to stamp them as threats to the political dynasty that the "Klingfish" founded 12 years ago.

ST. LOUIS YOUTH,
21, CONFESSES HE SHOT FATHER, 70

SALEM, Ill., Jan. 17.—Confession of 21-year-old Edgar Campbell of St. Louis that he shot and killed his father, and then set fire to his father's house in an attempt to conceal the crime, was announced today by State's Attorney Ward P. Holt.

The victim was William T. Campbell, 70, a well-to-do farmer. The elderly man's body was found in the ruins of his home Monday night after the son had run, nude, about half a mile to the home of a neighbor to report the fire.

According to Holt, young Campbell confessed he had run from the burning house without clothes to make it appear he had been bathing when the fire started.

"I killed my father because he was mean to my mother," Holt quoted the youth.

Young Campbell's parents were divorced in 1936, when Mrs. Campbell moved to St. Louis with Edgar, four other sons and two daughters. Since that time Edgar had visited his father occasionally, but he said, they always argued about his mother.

Regime of Huey Long's
Brother in Jeopardy

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 17.—Marking the most serious threat to the state administration since the ascension to power of the late Sen. Huey P. Long, a second Democratic state primary loomed as a strong possibility today.

Although most Louisiana was still counting ballots today, indications from incomplete and unofficial returns pointed to the running of a second primary election to nominate a governor.

Gov. Earl K. Long—on whom the mantle of responsibility fell during a period when the state was being rocked by revelations of graft and corruption—led four opposition candidates but his lead was not sufficient to bring nomination.

Under state Democratic laws the winning candidate must receive a plurality in excess of the combined vote of opposition candidates.

Riding high on a "reform" program to "clean up" Louisiana, Sam Jones, Luke Charles attorney, and State Sen. James A. Nee piled up enough votes to stamp them as threats to the political dynasty that the "Klingfish" founded 12 years ago.

With 537 of the state's 1704 precincts reporting, the count this morning stood:

With temperatures ranging downward to five degrees and the state blanketed under one to four inches of snow, Ohioans today faced the prospect of more flurries and even colder weather.

Forecasters predicted light snow and colder today, with continued cold Thursday.

The highway patrol reported all roads in bad condition except those along the Ohio River around Ironton, Gallipolis, Pomeroy and Georgetown. Ice formed on the roads in the Chillicothe area, while snowdrifts complicated travel in the Cleveland and Chardon areas.

It was the heaviest snowfall of the season in the northeastern counties, the patrol said. Highway department crews were at work on the more dangerous sections of the roads.

Bowling Green reported an official low of five above.

A reading of eight degrees was reported at Hayesville; nine at East Liverpool, 10 at Akron, 11 at Cleveland, 12 at Columbus and Dayton, and 13 at Cambridge. Cincinnati was the warmest big city in the state with a reading of 21.

Circleville's lowest temperature Wednesday was 12 degrees, according to the government thermometer in Miss Abbe Mills Clarke's care. State highway workers started to fight the heavy snowfall at 7 p. m. Tuesday and continued through the night. Snow was being plowed off the main thoroughfares, and cinders and sand were being tossed at more dangerous intersections.

Mannerheim, Grizzled Finn Leader, Hurls Dramatic Defy at Russians

PARIS, Jan. 17 — "We will fight to the last of our old men and the last of our children."

"We will burn our houses and our forests."

"We will destroy our towns and our industries—and what we give to the Russians will be cursed by nature."

"We have held out for seven weeks—one against fifty—along a 600-mile land front and an even greater front on the sea."

Mannerheim, who led the Finns in their revolt against Russia immediately after the Bolshevik uprising, renewed his nation's appeal for aid from abroad.

"The assistance given by France and other countries has been useful, but continued help is needed," he said.

"More is necessary than mere expressions of international indignation against Russia's aggression."

THIS self-explanatory map shows why neutral Holland and Belgium are suffering from the jitters again. Close to 1,000,000 Belgian and Dutch soldiers are reported massed along the eastern borders ready to repulse any German flank attack against the Allies.

GIBBSTOWN, N. J., Jan. 17 — Two men were killed and one was injured in an explosion at the Du Pont plant here today, according to employees.

It blew out virtually every window in the Gibbstown grade school, located on Broad Street one mile from the Du Pont plant. The startled pupils were sent to their homes.

A cordon of state troopers, rushed here from nearby stations, was thrown around the fenced-in plant to which no one but officials of the firm were admitted.

Senator Connally (D) Texas who demanded that the foreign relations committee be given the proposal to study, opposes any Finnish aid.

"It's taking sides," he said. "It's setting a bad precedent. We shouldn't make any loans to any foreign country. It doesn't make any difference that the loans would be indirect, and would go specifically to a corporation. We know they would be for the aid of the Finnish government."

Minton Opposed

Senate Democratic whip Minton of Indiana said:

"I want to be mighty careful. I'm against any direct loans."

Immediately after Mr. Roosevelt's letter was read to the senate a fiery denunciation of "any loans to any foreign country engaged in conflict" was made by Senator George (D) Georgia, a foreign relations committee member. Sharp criticism was directed at the loan proposal by various members before it was jointly referred to the banking and foreign relations committees, with the latter given the last word in committee approval or disapproval.

The country vote, still so scattered as to be without final significance, gave Jones a lead over Long. This, however, was slight and could be overcome by strong support from parishes (counties) that have not been reported.

Counting today was proceeding in a calm that contrasted sharply with yesterday's balloting which was marked by many outbreaks of violence, charges of bribery and intimidation and complaints to federal authorities who are still digging into previous allegations of political graft and corruption.

NORWALK SOLON READY TO BEGIN SENATE EFFORT

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17—His conference with Mayor Harold H. Burton closed, Congressman Dudley A. White of Norwalk today was believed prepared to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the U. S. Senate at a McKinley Day dinner in Norwalk on February 6.

Burton, who also is seriously considering entering the senatorial race, said he and White had agreed that a bitter fight by northern Ohio candidates would have "unfortunate political results."

He added that the "general political situation" was discussed, but that no decisions were arrived at.

White was said to be ready to enter the race regardless of what Burton does, and the prospect of an inter-party battle may prompt Burton to stay out of the primary.

Dinner Honors Retiring Educator; 120 At Event

Charles H. May, who January 1 completed 24 years as a member of the Circleville board of education, was honored Tuesday evening when 120 friends and associates gathered in the Presbyterian Church to participate in a testimonial dinner for the retiring educator. Many persons in the assemblage were teachers in the Circleville school system. The evening was planned by the Ladies' Aid Society and Men's Club of the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Robert Kelsey serving as toastmaster.

Addresses were offered by Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools, and by Fred C. Clark. Mrs. May responded briefly, and Mr. May spoke concerning his 24 years on the board of education.

He declared that he felt very gratified that the community had shown its confidence in him by permitting him to be on the board of education for that length of time. He recalled his experiences as a teacher many years ago, and stressed the necessity for teachers to be examples for the children in school.

He discussed the changes in social and economic life and the need for changes in the method of training youth of the present day. Mr. May discussed, too, the fact that expenses of operating a school system have practically doubled in the last 24 years.

Mr. May quoted figures to show that he had seen 1,337 persons graduated from the city schools in the 24 years of his service, that he has attended 720 board meetings, for a total of 2,160 hours.

Music provided part of the evening's entertainment, Miss Abbie Mills Clarke playing the piano accompaniment and Mr. Clark directing.

Turkey was on the menu for the dinner served by the ladies of the church.

ITALY'S FASCIST PARTY WARNED TROUBLE CLOSE

ROME, Jan. 17—Italy may be forced to go to war "at any moment," Ettore Muti, new secretary-general of the Fascist party, warned today at a conference of Fascist chiefs of Central Italy.

"We must not be lulled to sleep under the illusion that the present situation (including Italian neutrality) will be perpetuated," he said.

"Italy at any moment may face the necessity of taking up arms," Muti, 37-year-old war veteran, spoke with the authority not only of his own high position, but that gained by his close connections with Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

Ciano, it was said, was largely responsible for the appointment of Muti to succeed Achille Starace as head of the party.

Muti demanded of his Fascist chiefs at today's meeting "absolutely uncompromising faithfulness to Fascist principles, and opposition to democracy, Bolshevism, and 'middle class-ism.'"

-50 Degree Weather Strikes War Zone; Russians Trapped?

companies announced yesterday was believed to mark a preliminary stage of a renewed Finnish attempt to surround and annihilate the two Russian divisions which have been defending themselves vigorously against raids launched by Finnish ski fighters.

(A dispatch from Stockholm said that a corps of Swedish volunteers is now somewhere in Finland, ready for action, under command of Col. Magnus Dryssen, who left a Swedish regiment to enter the Finnish service.)

(Dryssen was quoted as stating that the Swedish fighters were picked men who had received military training, and that some of them had served in the Spanish Civil War and the French Foreign Legion.)

(The volunteer corps possesses first-class equipment, the report added, as well as excellent medical resources and no serious cases of illness have broken out despite the extreme cold. Two Swedish clergymen are attached to the corps.)

While major ground operations were restricted owing to the weather, between 70 and 80 Soviet planes carried out bombardments of interior Finland yesterday. Hundreds of civilians whose homes were wrecked by the raids were left without adequate shelter in the bitter weather.

The Finnish air force replied by bombarding Russian troop detachments. Finnish pursuit planes and anti-aircraft batteries brought down four more Soviet bombers.

At Hangoe 11 fires raged as a result of repeated raids by planes which dropped incendiary bombs, while at Ekenaes 400 of the town's 700 houses were in ruins as a result of daily bombers which have made Ekenaes famous as "Finland's Guernica."

Abo, also in southern Finland, was heavily raided and 50 persons there were reported to have been killed.

As a result of the Red air raids, Finnish authorities decided to enforce compulsory evacuation of centers in southern Finland, including Hangoe, Abo, Ekenaes, Karis and Riihimaki.

TIMID BURGLAR OBTAINS $20,000 WORTH OF GEMS

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—An intensive police hunt was on today for a timid and nervous burglar who locked Mrs. Vincent Hubbell, an internationally known society woman, and her maid in the closet of their Park Avenue apartment and ransacked it of $20,000 worth of jewelry.

The women finally freed themselves by breaking in the closet door with a shelf which they wrenched loose. The nervous burglar overlooked $25,000 which Mrs. Hubbell had hidden under her bed before retiring. He entered the apartment in the guise of a delivery boy.

Girl Scouts To Assist In Local Campaign Against Child Ailment

Issuing a proclamation this week, Governor John Bricker designated the week of January 22 to 27 as "March of Dimes Week" in Ohio to support the fight against infantile paralysis.

Circleville schools, gathering places and all public buildings are displaying the little banks that have been made to collect all contributions in behalf of the fight against the dread virus.

Half of all the monies collected will be sent to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the remainder is applied to the local county chapter to aid it in its fight.

The governor's proclamation reads:

"I, John W. Bricker, governor of the State of Ohio, do hereby proclaim the week of January 22 to 27 inclusive as March of Dimes Week. I am asking all the citizens of the great state of Ohio to cooperate and thereby help this army of public-spirited workers in the 88 counties in Ohio, as their contribution to a worthy cause, a fight against infantile paralysis, which Dr. Upham has called childhood's enemy number one. Thus can we achieve Chairman Trautman's goal of 'Help Ohio Lead the Nation in the '40 Celebration.'"

The Girl Scouts of Circleville will aid the March of Dimes by selling infantile paralysis buttons on the streets on Saturday, January 27.

EDUCATORS ASSIGN FUNDS AFTER ADOPTING BUDGET

The Circleville board of education met in a lengthy session Tuesday evening to adopt a revised budget and allocate funds for the various functions of the school system. Frank Fischer, superintendent, said that a reduction in the budget as decreed by the County Budget Commission had forced curtailment in all branches. However, the educator pointed out, no function has been eliminated.

ASHVILLE

By S. D. Fridley, Ashville, Phone 79

Beginning on a Friday at the dismissal of school, and now very soon, the Madison Township school board is having the smoke stack rebuilt from the ground base on up to full height—a new and safe one, flue lining and everything. The work on this job when begun will be continuous until completed. The board hopes to have no halt in the school sessions. The contract for the work was awarded yesterday evening to the Floyd Dean Roofing Co., Circleville for $1290.

The Ashville-Harrison Joint school board at its session Monday evening with all members present, paid bills and completed the financial budget for the coming school year. The revenue necessary to conduct the Joint Ashville-Harrison high school, is derived from a percentage of tax levied on these two districts, amounting in round numbers, to eight million dollars—Harrison six, Ashville two with school expense portioned in this ratio.

At its meeting Monday evening the village council did nothing of importance except pay bills and reemploy attorney Emmitt Crist as village solicitor for another year. Because of weather conditions work of all kinds in the village is at a standstill.

To assist him in working out such plans as the county chairman may make for securing funds for the infantile paralysis campaign, Mayor Fred Hines has appointed Mrs. Mildred Kuhn, Mrs. Wilma Costlow, Lewis Hay and Guy Cline.

Wayne Brown, Madison Township, is sick abed with a severe cold... One week from today is the first session of the Ashville Farmer's Institute. A co-operative dinner was held in the Methodist Church on Monday night at 6:30 with the object of honoring the Church School Group who were classified as "One hundred percenters". A feature of the evening was a bouquet of flowers for the one hundred per centers, and place cards at the tables. Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN, ROOSEVELT WON'T ENTER NAME

WASHINGTON — The various state presidential primaries are going to be no help in breaking the President's silence on the third term question.

Political leaders were counting on these contests to force him to show his hand. But he has worked out a canny strategy to outwit them.

Private word has gone out from the White House to third-term boomers that the President is not sanctioning the entry of his name in any primary where the state law requires a personal authorization from a candidate. On the other hand, nothing will be done to stop any slate of pledged delegates in states where the permission of candidates is not needed.

In other words, "He ain't sayin' yes and he ain't sayin' no"—as usual.

This wily evasion was put to first use last week in meeting an undercover situation that had developed in Ohio. This state requires candidates to make written declarations, and a number of state leaders made a secret drive to persuade Roosevelt to enter the primary. They assured him of a hands-down victory, and argued that by sweeping Ohio he would torpedo all the other Democratic hopefuls, thus ensure his certain domination of the convention.

The President couldn't see it. Two long private conferences with Charles West, former Under Secretary of the Interior, who acted as emissary of the Ohio leaders, failed to produce any results. Roosevelt didn't irrevocably shut the door on his running again, but he did definitely tell West he was not entering any state primary.

NOTE—Ohio third-termers now are working to put up a stalking-horse "favorite son" candidate who would be for another term for Roosevelt.

PRAYER FOR TWO

There is a certain well-known society maiden in Washington who can tell you—but probably won't—just what the mysterious Chinese inscription on her treasured antique jade pendant means. She got the answer from Dr. Hu Shih, learned and courtly Chinese Ambassador, at the White House diplomatic reception.

He complimented her on the rarity and beauty of the exquisite necklace, and she asked him if he could decipher the inscription.

"I've long wanted to know what it means," she said. "But no one seems to be able to translate it. Is it really Chinese? I've almost decided it's not."

"Oh, yes, it's Chinese," replied Dr. Hu Shih. And after studying it a few moments, he inquired, "You really wish to know what it means?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Then, Madame, I can tell you. It is a prayer for twins."

lease of life that it has been necessary to shoot a few hundreds recently to cut down the herds. Census figures show the Indians gaining in numbers. Perhaps the American Longhorns will not become a lost race.

MILLIONS OF AIR RIDERS

FIVE million persons were passengers in airplanes last year. This is the figure of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and covers private and commercial flying in the United States and foreign lands. It is not concerned with military and naval aviation nor with experimental flying.

The passenger total represents an increase of nearly 55 percent over that of 1938, and was made possible, the C. A. A. believes, by the great advance in safety. As the public realizes that it is increasingly safe to travel by air, more people proceed to do so. There have been no serious airline accidents abroad in recent weeks, but in the United States the scheduled commercial air lines have made an amazing record of passenger-miles over a period of eight months without a fatal accident.

The reasons for such a record are listed. They include improved radio aids, beacon lights, weather reports, emergency landing fields, and so on. Planes become steadily better and pilots are thoroughly trained and competent.

This does not mean that there will be no more accidents on scheduled flights. It does mean that causes of accidents are being eliminated and overcome as far as is humanly possible, and that aviation has taken its place beside the other well-established modes of transportation with the hazards reduced to a minimum.

VANISHING LONGHORNS

THE Biological Survey reports that the famous Longhorn cattle that came to the Western Hemisphere with Cortez or soon after are almost gone. There are said to be only 250 pure bloods in existence.

The Longhorn cattle were once as important a part of the western and southwestern plains as the buffalo and the cowboy. They were tough and wise and adapted themselves readily to life in the New World. An authority has said of them, "No animal of the cow kind will shift and take care of itself under all conditions as will the longhorns; they can go farther without water and endure more suffering than others."

They were picturesque and as typically American as other naturalized Americans. It is said to be told that they will soon be gone.

Yet there is a ray of hope. The cowboy, the buffalo, the Indian have been reported as almost vanished before now, yet all three are coming back amazingly. Radio and dude ranches have saved the cowboy. Protection has given the buffalo a new

Wringer Hands a Modern Injury

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
What is the meaning of the surgical phrase "wringer hands"?

This is a new form of injury which has been observed by traumatic surgeons. A woman using her washing machine has her hand drawn between the moving rubber rolls of the electric clothes wringer. Often it is drawn in above the wrist. When the hand is released, it is pale and only moderately sore and, on the contrary, sometimes numb. X-ray shows no fracture.

It is important that treatment should be applied immediately. The hand should be elevated, and an absorbent cotton compression dressing should be applied. This must be held firmly in place with an elastic bandage and the hand maintained in the elevated position. If this is done, swelling can be prevented and tissue death (necrosis) prevented. The dressing must be removed and pressure reapplied every four hours during the next two or three days. If the compression bandage is not applied, great swelling will occur and large areas of skin slough off.

Sometimes the injury seems so unimportant that a physician is not consulted until several days later, when severe damage is seen to have occurred. Children may suffer from the same accident and the arm may be drawn in to the shoulder. The same measures should be used in treatment for the child as for the grown-up.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Bedding and Clothing," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Nutritive Value of Molasses
Has molasses any nutritive value other than its carbohydrate content? Molasses, even in January when it is supposed to be very slow, is a quick form of nutrition. A dietetic research group at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology reports that "molasses supplies abundance of organic iron of greater value than the chemicals usually injected into blood of anemic persons, and the poorer and darker grades are richer in iron than the more refined kinds."

The iron in molasses is in the form which is available for building up the red coloring matter of the blood. Molasses is about six parts of iron per unit, while beef liver stands second with five. Oatmeal is third with four. Apricots, eggs and raisins have only two-thirds, one-half and one-third as much iron as molasses. Spinach is only one-half of one part of iron.

Molasses, often called sorghum, has long been known to carry much of the vitamins of the green cane growth from which it is made. Buckwheat flour is high in vitamins A, B, G and E and a good content of minerals. Add yeast and butter and a stack of buckwheat cakes, well covered with molasses, is a highly revitalizing food for winter weather.

Mango Mouth

What is mango mouth? Cases have been reported of inflammation and swelling of the mouth from eating mango fruit. The condition is attributed to a substance contained in the peel of the fruit which protects it from insects. It may cause severe inflammation of the face.

SYNOPSIS
THE CHARACTERS:
ROMANY HALL, who wants to be a radio star.
CHOLLY O'NEIL, her pal, who plays in a music store.
BRENT NELSON, successful young announcer.
TERRY O'Rourke, who has a weakness for Cholly and for liquor.
BAXTER TREE, a continuity writer without a job.
YESTERDAY: Romany begins to learn about radio, with the help of Bax, at one of the important advertising agencies.

CHAPTER FIVE

"YOU CERTAINLY invited the town to this audition," Bob Lane said when he saw the mob that swarmed into the studio at 2 o'clock.

"Only six to a part," Delacarte shrugged. "Let 'em work. It won't hurt 'em!"

Romany and Baxter listened quietly from their corner. Lane had the faintest touch of irritation in his voice when he replied:

"Maybe some of them have passed up other chances to come up here this afternoon. When we're only going to use eight characters—"

"Forget it!" The director picked up a script. "I always like to make 'em think I've got a hard time making up my mind. But I can tell you right now who's going to get the parts."

"And who, may I ask?" Lane's jaw was a little set. It was damnably, being in charge of radio for Byrd-Cromwell, to have things so completely taken out of his hands.

"Myra Noyes for the female lead, Bill Bartner for the lawyer hero."

"You could find two people just as good who aren't so busy."

"Hell!" Delacarte exploded. "I don't have to make out their income tax. I take the ones you don't have to work with. Amateurs are a waste of time."

Romany felt a little sinking sensation, and a very definite dislike for the swartzy director. She hoped all directors didn't feel the same way. Lane, she decided, was rather nice. And she wondered why he didn't speak up and put the sarcastic Delacarte in his proper place. Bax nudged her sighing, and she knew he was deeply worried.

Just then Brent Nelson opened the door. Romany was pleasantly surprised when he walked over to her corner, smiling.

"Hello, Indiana! Nice to see you sitting in."

"Thanks to Baxter Tree." She gave the announcer her nicest smile. "Have you met?"

"They haven't, and when they had been introduced and had shaken hands, Nelson informed Baxter: 'I've been fortunate enough to get your announcing spot. Now we'll hope the show sells right away. Nice break for both of us.'"

"There's many a slip," sighed Bax, "between the cutting and the cake."

"Maybe," Brent grinned, "Green Eyes here will bring us luck."

"Quiet!" yelled Delacarte, looking over at the trio, much annoyed. "What is this? If you're going to stay in here, you'll have to keep your mouths shut."

Brent Nelson had nothing to fear from the strutting director. He grinned indifferently:

"You'd better lay off the bottle and go on a diet of that breakfast food you've been dishing out to the kids, Delacarte. You sound as though you might have a touch of indigestion."

Delacarte's face grew red, but he did not answer. Lane could have patted Nelson on the back. Instead, he motioned to Baxter to come and take the seat beside him.

That gave Brent his chance to invite Romany to have dinner with him. She hesitated a second, remembering her promise to dine with Bax. But she decided Brent could do so much for her it was foolishness to turn him down. Surely Bax would understand how necessary it was to take advantage of every opportunity that presented itself.

Bax seemed merely stunned as he listened to the selecting of the cast and heard the way his show had been butchered. There were whole pages he scarcely recognized.

Five of radio's leading women had read the part of Sylvia, the heroine of "Paradise Is Here," when

The other girls looked at each other knowingly as Myra Noyes read.

Myra Noyes sauntered in. "You try it, Myra," Delacarte said to her, opening a switch from the control room.

The other girls looked at each other knowingly, fully aware that it was all cut and dried. So, Romany thought to herself, that is the great fifty-thousand-a-year Myra Noyes.

She was a small blonde, thin faced, with scarlet lips and heavily blue shadowed eyes, matching the sky blue of her stunning childish gown. It was close fitting, revealing the traditionally thin fashionable figure. Romany decided she was entirely too heavily made up; theatrical. But with it all, striking.

Myra had read but a few lines in her dramatic school voice when Delacarte called enthusiastically: "That does it! Thanks, Myra. All you other girls may run along now. Better luck next time."

There was a slight stir of unrest in the studio as the crowd of hangers-on began to feel certain they were just wasting their breath. It was more or less a closed corporation they surmised, knowing Delacarte. They were all surprised to find it wasn't a child show, since the call had been from him.

Romany watched silently, and was unware of the comedy and drama of the situation because it was all so new to her. But once when Baxter turned and looked at her, she could see that he was very much upset.

Three actors had read the lead part of the young lawyer when Bill Bartner, small and red headed, took the microphone. After a few sentences Delacarte gave him the okay. Even he was getting weary of the farce of casting, and decided to move things along.

In a little more than an hour the cast was selected and the actual rehearsals began. Lane and Baxter might as well have been sticks of wood, for all the attention Delacarte paid to them. And they, wisely, left him strictly alone.

Lane was fully aware that he had, with cunning, selected a fool-proof cast that would interpret the characters according to Hoyle and save him the trouble of direction. It was a smart move, since he knew absolutely nothing about directing a dramatic show, nor did he have any conception as to what "Paradise" was all about.

After running through the show two times, Delacarte decided it was ready to cut.

"Now," he yelled, "watch your step. We're ready to go to town."

Romany was excited as an engineer got up and went to a table on which rested the equipment needed to record a show. She saw him take a large record and place it on a machine like a phonograph, while another man sat down and operated buttons and switches on a board in front of the director.

Delacarte, with a stop watch in his hand, snapped his fingers and the voice of Brent Nelson in the opening announcement came into the control room from the studio mike. Bax sat with his head bent over, his hand over his eyes, listening to the vaguely similar dialogue as it was interpreted by the familiar voice of Myra, radio's darling.

To Romany it was marvelous, and she was like a child at a party. She felt, too, that she was learning much that would help her later. She was watching how closely the players stood to the microphone, how they held their scripts and followed the director and his signals.

Baxter was living through the nightmare somehow, but he knew he would remember that day as long as he lived. The thought of being able to talk it all over with Romany at dinner was the one bright spot in an otherwise bleak world.

Two scripts were finally recorded. It was seven o'clock before they were finished. Lane had left at five-thirty. At the end Delacarte turned to an engineer:

"How about playin' 'em back so I can hear how they sound?"

"You'll have to wait till we take 'Uncle Tom's Children' off the air." The older engineer looked very tired.

By sitting and watching, Romany learned that they were picking a show up from a network and making it into a record. It was to be rebroadcast later in the evening. She was more certain than ever that radio was the only thing in the world she would ever want to do.

Baxter hid his disappointment admirably when, weary and discouraged, he suggested they would soon be ready to go to dinner. Romany had a twinge of conscience when she told him she had promised Brent Nelson she'd dine with him. But she explained to Bax exactly how she felt about it and told him it was an important contact she felt she just couldn't miss. She suggested they dine together the next evening and he, good naturedly, agreed it was a date.

Outside, Baxter decided he had much too great a headache to bother with food. So he took a long walk, the play-back of his slaughtered dramatic show running in his ears. Finally he sat down beside the lake and the music of the water soothed his jangled nerves.

After a while he had sufficiently rested to analyze Bob Lane's advice and decided it. He intended making radio drama his life's work. He would have to laugh things off. After all, radio was such a new art, no one knew much about it. It had become such an important factor in American life, that it was better to be a very little spoke in the radio wheel than nothing at all, he told himself.

While Baxter ate a hamburger in lonely solitude at a one-arm lunch, Romany and Nelson were dining and dancing at a fashionable lakeside night spot.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER of the Federal Bureau of Investigation wants more money from congress to keep up with his organization's detective work. His annual report to the lawmakers points out that his bureau simply hasn't enough sleuths to go around. Plenty of suspicious situations, he says, go unproved due to the lack of experts to do the necessary undercover work. What's more, J. Edgar remarks, the country hasn't enough cell-room to accommodate all the federal culprits whom the FBI does catch and convict. Unless we build more prisons, it appears that, by June 30 next year, we'll have had over 3,000 miscreants, under sentence and entitled to comfortable quarters, but homeless in a cold world—that is, as cold as our northern hemisphere get in June. It's an injustice to these birds, J. Edgar's report indicates, to keep 'em cell-less and unfed, after they've been properly found guilty and qualified for cosy quarters and good food in one or another of Uncle Sam's boosegows.

What stumps our congressmen is this: Why do we have so many more federal convicts than we used to have?

In prohibition days captured bootleggers accounted for a big increase, but even that wasn't as tremendous as the present one—maybe because bootleggers generally weren't convicted.

Now, though—what about it?

SPIES! PROPAGANDISTS!
The suspicious gentry now are international propagandists and spies—"espionage agents," as the latter are called.

The FBI is on their trail. Saboteurs are worse than propagandists and spies.

A propagandist just scatters publicity. Who cares for that? It's easy to counteract. A spy digs up military secrets of the country he's spying on. My personal opinion is that he's considerably exaggerated, as a menace.

A lot of the dope many spies peddle is available to anybody who'll take the trouble to hunt for it. Still it's just as well to detect and incarcerate him for awhile.

MENACE OF SABOTAGE
But saboteurs are outright dangerous. Their stunt is to throw physical grit into the industrial machinery of the nation they're assigned to operate in.

For instance, suppose an American factory is selling war supplies to the British and French. A German saboteur's job would be to put that factory out of business—perhaps by means of an explosion, or the saboteur's instigation. Or he does some unliking work in the insides of an American aviation plant's flying craft—something that won't show superficially, but which will make those airships collapse aloft subsequently, in action.

Oh, there are plenty of ways in which a saboteur can be a good deal worse than a propagandist or even a spy can be. The saboteur's dirty work classifies as malicious mischief, of capital, federal proportions. No wonder the FBI is on their trail.

TRUST BUSTING
Chief Thurman Arnold of the Justice department's anti-trust division also mentions anti-trust law violators as altogether too numerous for the FBI to get convincing evidence against.

This group of malefactors probably wouldn't materially increase our prison population even if they all could be caught, for I never heard of an anti-trust lawbreaker who got a penitentiary sentence. Injunctions and other forms of civil procedure are the government's weapons against 'em.

Nevertheless, an injunction can't be made to stick without preliminary investigation, and the FBI hasn't men enough to conduct it.

Chief Arnold says he has more than 650 complaints on hand that the justice department hasn't inquisitors enough to make so much as a start on.

However, espionage investigation is the main thing that has FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover completely snowed under. In the meantime we need room for more federal prisoners. We have 'em packed in like sardines already. If J. Edgar gets the necessary appropriation to add yet more thousands to the list, we'll have standing room only at Atlanta, Leavenworth, Alcatraz and elsewhere.

deal worse than a propagandist or even a spy can be. The saboteur's dirty work classifies as malicious mischief, of capital, federal proportions. No wonder the FBI is on their trail.

TRUST BUSTING

Chief Thurman Arnold of the Justice Department's anti-trust division also mentions anti-trust law violators as altogether too numerous for the FBI to get convincing evidence against.

This group of malefactors probably wouldn't materially increase our prison population even if they all could be caught, for I never heard of an anti-trust lawbreaker who got a penitentiary sentence. Injunctions and other forms of civil procedure are the government's weapons against 'em.

Nevertheless, an injunction can't be made to stick without preliminary investigation, and the FBI hasn't men enough to conduct it.

Chief Arnold says he has more than 650 complaints on hand that the justice department hasn't inquisitors enough to make so much as a start on.

However, espionage investigation is the main thing that has FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover completely snowed under. In the meantime we need room for more federal prisoners. We have 'em packed in like sardines already. If J. Edgar gets the necessary appropriation to add yet more thousands to the list, we'll have standing room only at Atlanta, Leavenworth, Alcatraz and elsewhere.

Wringer Hands a Modern Injury

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the meaning of the surgical phrase "wringer hands"?

This is a new form of injury which has been observed by traumatic surgeons. A woman using her washing machine has her hand drawn between the moving rubber rolls of the electric clothes wringer. Often it is drawn in above the wrist. When the hand is released, it is pale and only moderately sore and, on the contrary, sometimes numb. X-ray shows no fracture.

It is important that treatment should be applied immediately. The hand should be elevated, and an absorbent cotton compression dressing should be applied. This must be held firmly in place with an elastic bandage and the hand maintained in the elevated position. If this is done, swelling can be prevented and tissue death (necrosis) prevented. The dressing must be removed and pressure reapplied every four hours during the next two or three days. If the compression bandage is not applied, great swelling will occur and large areas of skin slough off.

Sometimes the injury seems so unimportant that a physician is not consulted until several days later, when severe damage is seen to have occurred. Children may suffer from the same accident and the arm may be drawn in to the shoulder. The same measures should be used in treatment for the child as for the grown-up.

Nutritive Value of Molasses

Has molasses any nutritive value other than its carbohydrate content? Molasses, even in January when it is supposed to be very slow, is a quick form of nutrition. A dietetic research group at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology reports that "molasses supplies abundance of organic iron of greater value than the chemicals usually injected into blood of anemic persons, and the poorer and darker grades are richer in iron than the more refined kinds."

The iron in molasses is in the form which is available for building up the red coloring matter of the blood. Molasses is about six parts of iron per unit, while beef liver stands second with five. Oatmeal is third with four. Apricots, eggs and raisins have only two-thirds, one-half and one-third as much iron as molasses. Spinach is only one-half of one part of iron.

Molasses, often called sorghum, has long been known to carry much of the vitamins of the green cane growth from which it is made. Buckwheat flour is high in vitamins A, B, G and E and a good content of minerals. Add yeast and butter and a stack of buckwheat cakes, well covered with molasses, is a highly revitalizing food for winter weather.

Mango Mouth

What is mango mouth?

Cases have been reported of inflammation and swelling of the mouth from eating mango fruit. The condition is attributed to a substance contained in the peel of the fruit which protects it from insects. It may cause severe inflammation of the face.

YESTERDAY: Romany begins to learn about radio, with the help of Bax, at one of the important advertising agencies.

CHAPTER FIVE

"YOU CERTAINLY invited the town to this audition," Bob Lane said when he saw the mob that swarmed into the studio at 2 o'clock.

"Only six to a part," Delacarte shrugged. "Let 'em work. It won't hurt 'em."

Romany and Baxter listened quietly from their corner. Lane had the faintest touch of irritation in his voice when he replied: "Maybe some of them have passed up other chances to come up here this afternoon. When we're only going to use eight characters—"

"Forget it!" The director picked up a script. "I always like to make 'em think I've got a hard time making 'em think I can tell 'em right now who's going to get the parts."

"And who, may I ask?" Lane's jaw was a trifle set. It was damnable, being in charge of radio for Byrd-Cromwell, to have things so completely taken out of his hands. "Myra Noyes for the femme lead, Bill Barner for the lawyer hero."

"You could find two people just as good who aren't so busy."

"Hell!" Delacarte exploded. "I don't have to make out their income tax. I take the ones you don't have to work with. Amateurs are a waste of time."

Romany felt a little sinking sensation, and a very definite dislike for the swarthy director. She hoped all directors didn't feel the same way. Lane, she decided, was rather nice. And she wondered why he didn't speak up and put the sarcastic Delacarte in his proper place. Bax nudged her sighing, and she knew he was deeply worried.

Just then Brent Nelson opened the door. Romany was pleasantly surprised when he walked over to her corner, smiling.

"Hello, Indiana! Nice to see you sitting in."

"Thanks to Baxter Tree." She gave the announcer her nicest smile. "Have you met?"

They hadn't; and when they had been introduced and had shaken hands, Nelson informed Baxter: "I've been fortunate enough to get your announcing spot. Now we'll hope the show sells right away. Nice break for both of us."

"There's a nifty little slip," sighed Bax, "between the cutting and the cake."

"Maybe," Brent grinned, "Green Eyes here will bring us luck."

"Quiet!" yelled Delacarte, looking over at the trio, much annoyed. "What is this? If you're going to stay in here, you'll have to keep your mouths shut."

Brent Nelson had nothing to fear from the strutting director. He grinned indifferently: "You'd better lay off the bottle and go on a diet of that breakfast food you've been dishing out to the kids, Delacarte. You sound as though you might have a touch of indigestion."

Delacarte's face grew red, but he did not answer. Lane could have patted Nelson on the back. Instead, he motioned to Baxter to come and take the seat beside him.

That gave Brent his chance to invite Romany to have dinner with him. She hesitated a second, remembering her promise to dine with Bax. But she decided Brent could do so much for her it was foolishness to turn him down. Surely Bax would understand how necessary it was to take advantage of every opportunity that presented itself.

Bax seemed merely stunned as he listened to the selecting of the cast and heard the way his show had been butchered. There were whole pages he scarcely recognized.

Five of radio's leading women had read the part of Sylvia, the heroine of "Paradise Is Here," when

Today's Horoscope

The year ahead of those celebrating birthdays today will be eventful and somewhat difficult. They will, however, gain through inheritance. The health of themselves and those of their families should be safeguarded. Indications are that the child born on this day will be difficult to rear, needing much care and attention because of physical delicacy. Much intellectual ability, originality and some musical and artistic ability are foreshadowed.

The other girls looked at each other knowingly as Myra Noyes read.

Myra Noyes sauntered in. "You try it, Myra," Delacarte said to her, opening a switch from the control room.

The other girls looked at each other knowingly, fully aware that it was all cut and dried. So, Romany thought to herself, that is the great fifty-thousand-a-year Myra Noyes.

She was a small blonde, thin faced, with scarlet lips and heavily blue shadowed eyes, matching the sky blue of her stunning childish gown. It was close fitting, revealing the traditionally thin fashionable figure. Romany decided she was entirely too heavily made up; theatrical. But with it all, striking.

Myra had read but a few lines in her dramatic school voice when Delacarte called enthusiastically: "That does it! Thanks, Myra. All you other girls may run along now. Better luck next time."

There was a slight stir of unrest in the studio as the crowd of hangers-on began to feel certain they were just wasting their breath. It was more or less a closed corporation they surmised, knowing Delacarte. They were all surprised to find it wasn't a child show, since the call had been from him.

Romany watched silently, and was unaware of the comedy and drama of the situation because it was all so new to her. But once when Baxter turned and looked at her, she could see that he was very much upset.

Three actors had read the lead part of the young lawyer when Bill Barner, small and red headed, took the microphone. After a few sentences Delacarte gave him the okay. Even he was getting weary of the farce of casting, and decided to move things along.

In a little more than an hour the cast was selected and the actual rehearsals began. Lane and Baxter might as well have been sticks of wood, for all the attention Delacarte paid to them. And they, wisely, left him strictly alone.

Lane was fully aware that he had, with cunning, selected a fool-proof cast that would interpret the characters according to Hoyle and save him the trouble of direction. It was a smart move, since he knew absolutely nothing about directing a dramatic show, nor did he have any conception as to what "Paradise" was all about.

After running through the show two times, Delacarte decided it was ready to cut.

"Now," he yelled, "watch your step. We're ready to go to town."

Romany was excited as an engineer got up and went to a table on which rested the equipment needed to record a show. She saw him take a large record and place it on a machine like a phonograph, while another man sat down and operated buttons and switches on a board in front of the director.

Delacarte, with a stop watch in his hand, snapped his fingers and the voice of Brent Nelson in the opening announcement came into the control room from the studio mike. Bax sat with his head bent over, his hand over his eyes, listening to the vaguely similar dialogue as it was interpreted by the familiar voice of Myra, radio's darling.

To Romany it was marvelous, and she was like a child at a party. She felt, too, that she was learning much that would help her later. She was watching how closely the players stood to the microphone, how they held their scripts and followed the director and his signals.

Baxter was living through the nightmare somehow, but he knew he would remember that day as long as he lived. The thought of being able to talk it all over with Romany at dinner was the one bright spot in an otherwise bleak world.

Two scripts were finally recorded. It was seven o'clock before they were finished. Lane had left at five-thirty. At the end Delacarte turned to an engineer:

"How about playin' 'em back so I can hear how they sound?"

"You'll have to wait till we take 'Uncle Tom's Children' off the air." The older engineer looked very tired.

By sitting and watching, Romany learned that they were picking a show up from a network and making it into a record. It was to be rebroadcast later in the evening. She was more certain than ever that radio was the only thing in the world she would ever want to do.

Baxter hid his disappointment admirably when, weary and discouraged, he suggested they would soon be ready to go to dinner. Romany had a twinge of conscience when she told him she had promised Brent Nelson she'd dine with him. But she explained to Bax exactly how she felt about it and told him it was an important contact she felt she just couldn't miss. She suggested they dine together the next evening and he, good naturedly, agreed it was a date.

Outside, Baxter decided he had much to great a headache to bother with food. So he took a long walk, the play-back of his slaughtered dramatic show running in his ears. Finally he sat down beside the lake and the music of the water soothed his jangled nerves.

After a while he had sufficiently rested to analyze Bob Lane's advice and decided if he intended making radio drama his life's work he would have to laugh things off. After all, radio was such a new art, no one knew much about it. It had become such an important factor in American life, that it was better to be a very little spoke in the radio wheel than nothing at all, he told himself.

While Baxter ate a hamburger in lonely solitude at a one-arm lunch, Romany and Nelson were dining and dancing at a fashionable lakeside night spot.

D. A. R. Picks Delegates For Cleveland Meeting

Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker Offers Address On McGuffey

Despite the fact that snow was falling outside to make it a typical wintry day, enough members of the Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, attended the regular meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Bryce Briggs to make it a very worthwhile session, convention delegates being elected during the business hour.

Delegates chosen for the State Convention to be held at the Hotel Cleveland in Cleveland March 11-14 include Mrs. C. C. Watts, regent, Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, Mrs. James Adams, and Miss Mary Heffner. Their alternates are Mrs. George Hammond, Miss Marie Hamilton, Miss Florence Dunton, Mrs. Bryce Briggs and Mrs. Glenn I. Nickerson. Those named as delegates to the next National D.A.R. Congress at Washington D. C., were Mrs. Watts, and Mrs. Helen B. Anderson, the alternates chosen including Mrs. C. D. Closson, Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck and Mrs. H. D. Jackson.

The program consisted of the topic "William Holmes McGuffey, his Life and his Time" and was ably presented by Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker. Her discussion of his life and work was of extreme interest and was made doubly so by the exhibit of McGuffey Readers and Spellers furnished.

Readings from McGuffey volumes were next given by Mrs. George Hammond, Miss Marie Hamilton, Mrs. Harry J. Dunlap and Mrs. Charles Gerhardt.

Lovely spring flowers were arranged in the dining room of the Briggs home where refreshments were served by Mrs. Briggs and her committee, Mrs. Nickerson, Mrs. Forrest Brown, Mrs. H. O. Pile, Mrs. Paul A. Johnson, Miss Charlotte Caldwell and Miss Edith Haswell.

D. A. R. Picks Delegates For Cleveland Meeting

Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker Offers Address On McGuffey

Despite the fact that snow was falling outside to make it a typical wintry day, enough members of the Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, attended the regular meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Bryce Briggs to make it a very worth while session, convention delegates being elected during the business hour.

Delegates chosen for the State Convention to be held at the Hotel Cleveland in Cleveland March 11-14 include Mrs. C. C. Watts, regent, Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, Mrs. James Adams, and Miss Mary Heffner. Their alternates are Mrs. George Hammond, Miss Marie Hamilton, Miss Florence Dunton, Mrs. Bryce Briggs and Mrs. Glenn I. Nickerson. Those named as delegates to the next National D.A.R. Congress at Washington D. C., were Mrs. Watts, and Mrs. Helen B. Anderson, the alternates chosen including Mrs. C. D. Closson, Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck and Mrs. H. D. Jackson.

Mrs. Watts was in the chair and was assisted by Mrs. Lee Shaner, first vice regent, in the transaction of business. Mrs. Dwight Steele, acting recording secretary, read minutes of meetings and called the roll which followed the ritualistic responses led by Mrs. Shaner and Mrs. Nickerson.

An invitation was read from Columbus Chapter, D.A.R., to their Guest Night, January 18, in Columbus.

An appeal was stressed to every D.A.R. member to contribute to the National Endowment Fund. Miss Elsie M. Jewell was named chairman of the committee to contact local members of the organization for individual donations to the fund.

Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker is chairman of the project which asks contributions of magazines and books to worthy organizations at any time.

Better films were discussed by Miss Clara Littlejohn who is interested in that feature of public entertainment.

The chapter decided to send an Easter box to a chosen student of Tamassee School and to support the approved schools department, in charge of Mrs. Charles H. May.

After election of delegates, the chapter joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner" the music of which was led by Mrs. James Moffitt and played by Miss Abbe Mills Clarke.

The program consisted of the topic "William Holmes McGuffey, his Life and his Time" and was ably presented by Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker. Her discussion of his life and work was of extreme interest and was made doubly so by the exhibit of McGuffey Readers and Spellers furnished.

Readings from McGuffey volumes were next given by Mrs. George Hammond, Miss Marie Hamilton, Mrs. Harry J. Dunlap and Mrs. Charles Gerhardt.

Lovely spring flowers were arranged in the dining room of the Briggs home where refreshments were served by Mrs. Briggs and her committee, Mrs. Nickerson, Mrs. Forrest Brown, Mrs. H. O. Pile, Mrs. Paul A. Johnson, Miss Charlotte Caldwell and Miss Edith Haswell.

Baumholtz, who previously held an average of 18 points a game, failed to score a single fielder. He did, however, account for five markers via the foul route. Jim Reiser, OW forward, led the scoring parade with 11 points.

Capital scored its third conference victory in five starts with another upset, dumping Kenyon, 58-48. Capital's Weaver, Helmick and Long held a scoring spree all their own, scoring 15, 14 and 12 points respectively.

Muskingum had little trouble in continuing their high-scoring ways at the expense of Kent State, taking the long end of a 60-46 count.

Ashland walloped Heidelberg, 52-41; DeSales fell, 61-38, before Bowling Green; Xavier handed a 44-29 pasting to Dayton, and Wittenberg spanked Findlay, 40-29. Hiram had no trouble with Thiel and took a 50-31 decision; Mount Union lost a close one to Denison, 41-38, and Alfred Holbrook took Rio Grande into camp by a 34-28 score.

TOWNSEND SAYS HE HASN'T ANY SKED PROTESTS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 17—State High School Athletic Commissioner H. R. Townsend asserted today that he had received no complaints regarding the proposed limited athletic schedules and elimination of post-season football games. "As a matter of fact," the commissioner declared, "I have received numerous letters upholding the belief that football bowl games should be eliminated in the future."

Opposition to eliminating bowl games has come mostly from factions in Toledo and Portsmouth, the commissioner said, although he added that he himself had received

GANNETT ENTERS RACE TO OBTAIN PARTY'S T O G A

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 17—Frank Gannett, the newspaper publisher, was in the race today for the Republican presidential nomination with a campaign pledged to unqualified overthrow of the New Deal and its principles.

"Our form of government will be menaced until the New Deal and its theorists are cleaned out, root and branch," Gannett declared at a civic reception and dinner at which he formally announced his candidacy.

Entrance of the 63-year-old publisher into the Republican race heralded a contest with District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey over the votes of the New York delegation to the C. O. P. national convention. Gannett entered the contest with the support of a number of political leaders from upstate New York counties and also of leaders in other states.

Rep. James W. Wadsworth of New York pledged his support to the Gannett campaign in a letter read at the dinner. On the basis of present alignments, Gannett's backers were claiming about 30 of New York state's 92 convention votes for him and about 50 votes in other states.

Gannett, who organized the committee to uphold constitutional government in attacking President Roosevelt's supreme court and governmental reorganization bills, entered the campaign with a scathing attack on the New Deal.

OHIO DELEGATES TO DEMOCRATIC MEET INFORMED

At-Large Party Officials To Support President For Third Term

VIC DONAHEY IS 'SON'

Limbach Says Senator Will Release Pledges If Trend Shows For F. D. R.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 17—President Roosevelt will be nominated for a third term but will decline the nomination, Democratic state chairman Arthur L. Limbach declared today in announcing that the 16 Ohio delegates-at-large will be pledged to support "another term."

The delegates will be pledged to Sen. A. V. Donahey as "favorite son" candidate, Limbach said, but first will be required to support the New Deal.

The chairman indicated that the state organization is working on the theory that he President will be nominated, will decline, but will maintain himself in a position where he may choose his successor.

Senator Donahey's consent as a "favorite son" has been obtained, Limbach said.

"And the arrangement also meets with the approval of Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley," he added.

The delegation will vote for Donahey as a group until he releases it, Limbach said. If it appears that Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation, Donahey will release the delegates before the "O" in the list of states is reached, Limbach declared.

"I am in accord with and will support the New Deal," he stated. The chairman emphatically declared that former Gov. Martin L. Davey will be ignored in the selection of the delegates-at-large.

However, he said, there was no way he could prevent Davey from becoming a delegate from his own district.

Charles Sawyer, who defeated Davey in the gubernatorial primary and was in turn defeated by Republican Gov. John W. Bricker, will decline a bid as a delegate-at-large, Limbach indicated, preferring to be the delegate from his own district at Cincinnati. Sawyer is now national committeeman for Ohio.

Limbach said he would head the delegation as chairman. Others certain to be named included: Francis W. Poulson, former state chairman; Mrs. Mildred Jaster, national committeewoman; former Sen. Robert Bulkeley, Cleveland; former Gov. George White, Marietta; Mrs. Sarah Krusling, Cincinnati; Mary Taylor, Lisbon; State Central Committee Chairman Earl H. Hanefeld, Ottawa; James A. Reynolds, Cleveland; and James W. Huffman, Columbus.

On the tentative list are former Gov. James M. Cox, Dayton and Miami publisher; John E. Nolan, Steubenville democratic leader; Joseph Hostettler, Cleveland; and Dennis F. Dunlavy, Astabula.

MORRIS ENTERS RACE

George M. Morris, retired Columbus educator, Wednesday announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for state senator from the tenth district, comprised of Franklin and Pickaway counties. Morris served as a member of the Senate in the 92nd General Assembly but was defeated for re-election in 1938.

TRUCK DRIVERS SEEKING HEAVY LOADS ADVISED

Truck operators who want permits to haul excess weight loads over state highways, effective immediately, will have to obtain necessary permits from the Ohio department of highways maintenance bureau, in Columbus, instead of from the Ohio highway patrol, as in the past.

Harry D. Metcalf, chief engineer in charge of maintenance for the Ohio department of highways, announced today that C. B. Cunningham will issue the permits, and be responsible for seeing that overloads are checked. The highway patrol will enforce the excess load law, as in the past, and check loads and scan permits, Metcalf said.

In order to obtain a permit a surety bond will have to be filed with the highway department maintenance bureau, the amount of the bond to be determined by the size and weight of the load it is proposed to transport.

Applications and bond forms, and other pertinent information, will be forwarded applicants when requests are received by Mr. Cunningham at the bureau of maintenance, Ohio department of highways, State Office building, Columbus, Mr. Metcalf said.

Miller died ten minutes after the robbery in an explosion when his car was ditched.

PASTOR TO TAKE CHARGE OF DRIVE TO AID FINNISH

COLUMBUS, Jan. 17 — Dr. Oscar Mees, pastor of Martin Luther Church in Canton, O., today assumed charge of the nationwide campaign of the church to raise a $500,000 fund for the relief of Finnish Lutherans.

Dr. Mees, a brother of Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital University, left for New York last night. Dr. Emmanuel Poppen, Columbus, president of the American Lutheran Church, said the campaign would be conducted during February and would not conflict with former President Hoover's Finnish Relief Fund. Finland, he pointed out, is 98 percent Lutheran.

It looks as if the Finns have liked not only Stalin, but Karl Marx.
